

Dr Matt DeLozier: Matt DeLozier is the Dean High School Programs and Services at Northeast State Community College. DeLozier's experience is primarily with building programs that provide access to college content to high school students in both the Early College setting and in the promotion of STEM fields. This includes building working relationships between educational systems and determining and meeting STEM needs and delivery opportunities for Northeast State. Prior to coming to Northeast State Community College he served as the Early College liaison at Haywood Community College in Clyde, North Carolina where he worked to build stand-alone high schools as well as high school programs. Before entering the education arena, DeLozier spent many years in business and industry including metal design and fabrication positions as well as managing the industrial lubricants divisions within oil companies and distributorships.