ONGOING RESEARCH PROJECTS

Title: Women's Reproductive Health and Stress Study

Summary: The Women's Reproductive Health and Stress Study used social media to recruit a large, international sample of women of reproductive age, with oversampling for women currently pregnant, with children, or experiencing infertility. The purpose of this mixed-methods study is to examine the relationships between psychosocial factors, such as trauma history, relationship satisfaction, and mental health symptoms, and reproductive health outcomes, such as infertility, pregnancy and birth complications, and sexual functioning.

Role: Principal Investigator

Title: Infertility Stigma Study

Summary: The purpose of this qualitative study was to explore the perception of stigma among women experiencing infertility, with the intention of developing a measure to assess infertility-related stigma. My lab and Dr. Williams' lab have been collaborating to analyze the qualitative transcript data by creating a code list and engaging in thematic analysis coding of the transcripts.

Role: Co-Investigator

Principal Investigator: Stacey Williams, PhD

Title: Stigma, Health, and Resilience in LGBTQ Americans during the 2016 Presidential Election

Summary: This study, which is part of a larger national study on LGBT health outcomes, is investigating whether experiences of stigma and discrimination predict mental and physical health outcomes in an LGBT sample. We will further attempt to clarify factors which may mediate this relationship.

Role: Co-Investigator

Principal Investigator: Jameson Hirsch, PhD

Title: Mental Health Practitioners in Training: Attitudes and Knowledge of Sexual and Gender Minority Populations

Summary: The purpose of this study is to gather information about how mental healthcare practitioners in training view sexual and gender minority populations. Our team plans to survey practitioners in training in a variety of disciplines, including psychiatry, psychology, mental health nursing, social work, and counseling regarding their knowledge and attitudes about working with sexual and gender minority patients/clients, as well as their knowledge regarding TN's law allowing mental health practitioners to decline to treat clients on religious grounds.

Role: Co-Investigator

Principal Investigator: Abbey Mann, PhD

Other Co-Investigators: Stacey Williams, PhD; Ivy Click, EdD; Brittany Wilkins, PhD

Title: South Carolina Choose Well Initiative to Reduce Unintended Pregnancy

Summary: The purpose of this large-scale, multi-year project is to reduce rates of unintended pregnancy in South Carolina. I assisted with qualitative data analysis from "Project 2" of the Choose Well Initiative, drawn from focus groups exploring South Carolina women's views of and experiences with contraception. I additionally assisted in creating a report for stakeholders summarizing the results of the qualitative analysis and presented findings in a panel discussion format on campus.

Role: Qualitative Data Analyst

Primary Investigators: Amal Khoury, PhD, MPH; Michael Smith, DrPH; Joel Hillhouse, PhD; Katie Baker, DrPH; Mary Ann Littleton, PhD

Title: College Students' Health Risk Behaviors

Summary: The purpose of this research study is to investigate health behaviors of college students, and to better understand factors that predict students' engagement in risky health behaviors such as alcohol and substance use, tobacco use, poor diet or physical activity, or risky sexual behavior. Previous research has shown that engagement in these types of behaviors can negatively impact individuals' health long-term, and so better understanding engagement in these behaviors can help researchers develop interventions to improve college student health.

Role: Principal Investigator

Co-Investigator: Diana Morelen, PhD

Title: Religion, Emotions, and Current Health (REACH)

Summary: The broad goal of this study is to identify distal (past) and proximal (current) factors that predict mental health symptoms in young adults (college students). Moderating and mediating factors include emotion socialization in childhood, religious socialization in childhood, current emotion regulation, and current religious/spiritual practices.

Role: Co-Investigator

Principal Investigator: Diana Morelen, PhD
